

bands stood on the platform holding staves, and ten others similarly attired marched in front.

THE TAILORS

Next came the Shoemakers, about 500 in all, wearing blue and gold badges. They carried no banners. On the front of one was the following inscription:

Down with monopoly and the prison contract system.
On the front of the other was the following:
If prisoners work let the State reap the benefit thereof.
And on the back:
Eight hours a fair day's labor.
The Pambas and Housenaths were fifteen.
They numbered 200 men and wore blue badges.
Next came the Coopers. They were 300 strong, and were without badges. Their banner bore the following inscription.

"Labor is just power and nothing less."
 Their flags had small barrels on top of the poles.
 The Marble Policers and Rubbers followed.
 They numbered about 250, and wore no uniforms.
 Next came the Brotherhood of United Colored Society of Brooklyn, 600 strong, with their Society banner; and after them a small delegation of colored artisans from Brooklyn headed by a colored band. Four of their number rode in a carriage.

LARY OF ALL
 was the Vereenicht Ticher, a German association of 300 men. Polics marched in front and rear.
 The men marched ten deep, and the procession

The sidewalks along the entire route were jammed with spectators. It really seemed that all the working men were in procession, and that the idlers had turned out to look at them. The City Hall Park was impassable with people, and the view of the city from itself was obscured. The Chicago end of the rail line was a lively place.

Business from 3 to 5 o'clock was almost entirely suspended in the lower part of the city.

The drivers of the cars, who lost their pay for three or four trips, made the air blue with their cursing, while the crowd of the blocked-up truckmen were not a jot more despondent. Cautious Grand, and Fulton streets were impassable to pedestrians for fully an hour after the procession had passed.

THE MASS MEETING.

The meeting in the Cooper Union was attended by about 3,000 persons, many of them the wives and daughters of the workmen. The meeting was enthusiastic. The speeches were interrupted by bursts of applause. Mr. Alexander Brown, an attorney, spoke last, and the meeting broke up in a noisy, happy way.

against the present President of the United States, who had said he did not want to know anything of the labor movement (Rapturous applause.) President Grant, he said, was an enemy of the workingman, and he told the labor movement that the president said "you must not let President who will consider himself bound by the Constitution to do right, to do right by every one. (Tremendous applause, and cries "We will.") I shall telegraph him to night. Will we not attend to it because he is too busy to attend to the Government, Long Branch? (Roar of laughter.)

Only the President Grant, but also William M. Tweed & Co. (Loud applause.)

MINN HOURA A DAY.

NEWCASTLE-ON-TYNE, Sept. 13. — The strikers' League in favor of nine hours for a day's work have issued a manifesto expressing the hope that the fight will be continued until a complete victory is obtained over the employers. The manifesto promises that as long as the strike continues the men will not provide for. Eight shillings a week will be paid to each man and one shilling for each child engaged in the strike.

A Terrible Conflict in the White Plains Prison—The Desperado Buckshot Throats the Sheriff's Deputy.

Yesterday morning at 7 o'clock, as Deputy Sheriff Ford, jailer of the county jail at White Plains, opened the door of the cell where Buckshot, the Sleepy Hollow murderer, is confined, the culprit sprang upon the officer, seizing his throat and pushing him out into the jail yard. He soon tripped

The Sheriff then placed his knee upon Bucknott's breast. He found in the murderer's possession, secreted in his clothing, a well sharpened case knife which he was endeavoring to draw out. Mr. Ford, with a well directed blow of his fist square between the eyes, knocked Buckshot senseless for an instant, and then jerked the knife away and threw it across the yard. His next slipper a pair of alppers on the desperado's hands. He was not one moment too soon, however, for at the same instant Buckshot regained consciousness and with almost super-and found Buckhout as quiet as a kitten. When questioned about his conduct he pretended to know nothing about it. He seemed anxious to explain away his bloody nose and blood, and the sheriff told him that he had not seen the jailer at morning.

Buckhout will remain ironed and chained to the floor until he goes to the scaffold. How he obtained the knife is a mystery.

Gov. Hoffman is expected to visit White Plains to-day.

A FAMILY'S RUIN.

The Inequality of the Will of Dr. Connelley

MONTRÉAL, Sept. 15.—Yesterday in the French Cathedral, a rich American lady, widow of Dr. Connelly, who a short time ago in New York murdered his two children in a fit of insanity and then committed suicide, became a raving maniac in the midst of church services. She suddenly shrieked in a frightful manner, and was with difficulty removed. Since her husband's tragic end, Dr. Connelly has shown frequent signs of insanity.

Burned.
Late last night Peter C. Wilson's livery stable, 33 Perry street, was burned, and twenty-three horses perished. One of the horses on livery was worth $3 000.

Tragedy in Forty-fifth Street.
Early yesterday morning, as private watchman W. J. Wygan was extinguishing the lights on his post in Forty-fifth street, near Sixth avenue, he was assailed by Owen Woods, of Fortieth street and Eleventh avenue. Mr. Wigan, finding that the ruffian meant to kill him, drew his pistol and fired five shots at him in quick succession. One of the balls struck Woods in the left breast in the region of the heart, and he fell to the sidewalk seriously wounded. Woods was found to be laboring under an attack of delirium tremens. Wigan was committed by Justice Coulter.
